Marketing Plan & Timeline

Joint Webinar Strategy: Service Titan Hacks + TradeRunner

Target Date: Thursday, January 15th @ 2:00 PM EST

Format: Interactive "Fireside Chat" / Interview (45 Minutes)

Host: Bill (Service Titan Hacks) | Guest: TradeRunner Team

1. Core Strategy: The "NEPQ" Approach

Our audience (contractors) has high "sales resistance." If we pitch them hard, they will tune out.

Instead, we will use the NEPQ (Neuro-Emotional Persuasion Questioning) methodology.

- The Shift: We aren't selling a "database." We are solving a "pipeline problem."
- Bill's Role: Bill will act as the "Skeptical Advocate" for the audience. He will ask the hard questions that contractors are thinking but might be afraid to ask.
- TR's Role: You are the experts revealing a "Hidden Market." You aren't selling; you are educating on why the old way (Indeed) is broken and how the new way (Outbound) works.

2. Marketing Timeline & "The Build-Up"

We need to create problem awareness before we offer the solution. Here is the promotion schedule we will execute:

Phase 1: The Tease (Jan 2 - Thursday)

- Channel: Facebook Group Only
- Goal: Prime the algorithm and gauge interest without a link.
- Concept: Bill posts a "curiosity" post asking the group if they are tired of paying for "Warm Body" applicants. He mentions he is "investigating" a new outbound tool and asks if the group wants to see it.

Phase 2: The Launch (Jan 6 - Tuesday)

- Channel: Email Blast #1 + FB Post
- Subject: 'Struggling to hire top techs?'
- Concept: We officially announce the session. We frame the problem: "The best techs aren't on job boards." We invite them to see how we can "hunt" for talent instead of waiting for it.

Phase 3: The Agitation (Jan 12 - Monday)

- Channel: Email Blast #2
- Subject: The true cost of an empty truck

- Concept: We focus on the pain. Why waiting for inbound leads is a bottleneck for 2026 growth. We position the webinar as the strategic fix for their labor constraint.

Phase 4: The "Blitz" (Jan 15 - Webinar Day)

- Channel: Email #3 (AM) + "We are Live" Email (2 PM) & facebook post
- Concept: "Bill is grilling the founders today." We emphasize that this is a live demo, not a slide deck.

Webinar Run-of-Show: The "Invisible" Labor Market: The TradeRunner Method for Finding A-Players Who Aren't on Indeed.

Host: Bill (Service Titan Hacks) Guest: Andre & Karan (TradeRunner) Time: 45 Minutes Hard Stop (Unless Q&A is on fire)

1. The Warm-Up & The Hook (Minutes 0–5)

Visual: Bill and Founder on camera. No slides yet.

0:00 - The "Hard Start" (Do not wait for stragglers)

- Bill: "All right, we are live. Welcome, everyone. I'm going to skip the long intros because I know you guys are busy. We are here because, in the Service Titan Hacks group, we talk a lot about optimizing operations and marketing. But none of that matters if you "you can't hire good techs to fill your trucks."

0:02 - The Status Quo (The Problem)

- Bill: "Here is the reality most of us are facing: You need a tech. You post on Indeed. You spend $1,000. You gotta wait 2 weeks to get 50 applications, and 48 of them either have no experience or are completely unqualified. I think we've all seen the doordash driver applications. And then when you finally do find the 1 or 2 applications that might be qualified, you can't get in touch with them because Indeed messaging is basically useless. You end up hiring a 'Warm Body' because you're desperate. Three months later, they're gone, and you're back to square one. Question for the chat: Put a '1' in the chat if you've hired a 'Warm Body' in the last year just to plug a hole."

0:04 - The Setup

- Bill: "I'm here with Andre & Karan from TradeRunner. I brought them on because they've built an AI-powered hiring product specifically for HVAC & plumbing companies that lets you instantly find qualified techs to hire. They say you won't find the best techs on Indeed because they're busy working for your competitor. And they built this tool after seeing how terrible Indeed was for hiring in the trades. I want to put that to the test today. Andre & Karan, welcome."

2. The "Fireside Chat" (Minutes 5–20)

Visual: Split screen (Talking heads).

0:05 - The "Manual" Story (Bill's Context)

- Bill: "Before we look at the software, I want to frame this. When I was growing my company, I realized I couldn't wait for applicants. I went to the trade schools. I sat on boards. I picked the best students before they graduated. That worked great for Apprentices. But Andre & Karan, my struggle was always the Experienced Techs that actually produced results for my business. I couldn't walk into a competitor's shop and recruit. NEPQ Question: Why is it that the 'Old Way'—posting an ad and waiting—is failing us so badly right now for experienced talent?"
- Founder: Great point. The 'old way' of hiring through job boards is really failing because of 3 main reasons.
 - Number 1 is that it's reactive, rather than proactive. A position opens up, you're scrambling to create the job post, and then sit back and hope for applications to come in. So you're already behind the shot clock because the delay between needing to fill a position and actually getting applications coming in is typically a few weeks at best.
 - Number 2 is that the size of your talent pool is super limited because someone has to be actively searching on Indeed at the right time, when they're showing your job at the top, to submit an application. So you're getting a tiny fraction of the actual addressable talent pool out there that can be a fit for your job.
 - Number 3 is the quality. Like you said earlier Bill, most of the applications that come in through Indeed are completely irrelevant for the actual job. We've seen DoorDash drivers, forklift operators, and warehouse managers applying for experienced roles and it's just a colossal waste of time. And not to mention, the best candidates aren't applying on Indeed because they're busy working and they're in high demand! Often times, it's the unemployed lower quality candidates who are just firing off 50 applications per day, and no one wants to hire those folks.

0:08 - The "Invisible Market" Concept

- Founder: (Explains that A-Players are employed/passive and too busy to be scanning Indeed submitting applications. We've found that most candidates are open to new opportunities, but they aren't spending time searching for them. That's why proactively contacting them is a HUGE competitive advantage).
- Bill (Digging Deeper): "Okay, so you call them 'Passive Candidates.' If I'm an owner listening to this... how much revenue am I losing by only looking at the 'Active' candidates—the unemployed guys? What's the difference in quality?"
- Founder: (Explains that everybody WANTS to hire the employed guys because they're usually high performers. If someone is firing off applications and is unemployed, chances are they're not a top tech. And that's the issue with Indeed and other job boards. You're restricted only to people who apply to your job, and we've seen a HUGE disparity in quality between active and passive candidates. And with a tool like TradeRunner, you can proactively contact qualified techs, which no one else is doing)

0:12 - The Database (The "Hard" Question)

- Bill: "You guys mention on your site you have 20,000+ techs. I have to ask—where did this data come from? Did you just scrape LinkedIn? Because my guys aren't on LinkedIn. How do we know these are real people?"
- Founder: (Explains the sourcing, verification, and that these are blue-collar profiles, not corporate LinkedIn profiles). We use a variety of data providers to collect verified resumes into our system. And we're constantly adding folks, roughly 1K+ per week. To your point Bill, none of these guys are on LinkedIn which is what makes the database so valuable because you can't find them anywhere else. To be clear, this is not us guessing information or anything like that. Every single profile in our system is created from a verified resume and has that resume attached to it that you can download.

3. The "Proof" (Live Demo) (Minutes 20–30)

Visual: Screen Share (TradeRunner Dashboard).

0:20 - The Challenge

- Bill: "Okay, let's stop talking about it and see it. Can you share your screen? I want to do a live search. Let's look for a [Specific Role, e.g., HVAC Tech] in [City, e.g., Phoenix or Dallas]. I want to see how many people actually show up."

0:22 - The "Wow" Moment

- Founder: (Runs the search. Results populate).
- Bill (Commentary): "Wait, pause right there. Look at that second guy. 7 years experience? EPA certified? And he's not applying for jobs? He's just sitting there?"
- Founder: Yep, so you can see all the information you need to make a decision if you want to contact this candidate (location, credentials, work experience, etc.). And you can see that this guy is currently working at XYZ. So if he doesn't apply to your job on Indeed, you'd never know he existed. But the reality is that he's likely open to new job opportunities but isn't taking the time to scan Indeed for 3 hours a night and apply. And with TradeRunner, you know have identified this candidate and can text him directly, which no other company is doing. So it's really big advantage, especially when you're competing with other companies to hire these guys. And the last thing I'd say is that because of the direct contact with candidates, interviews can literally get scheduled in minutes through TradeRunner, rather than weeks or even months from a place like Indeed.

0:25 - The Outreach (The "Spam" Objection)

- Bill: "Here is the part that scares people. You have a button there that says 'Text.' If I text this guy out of the blue, isn't he going to get mad? Isn't this spam? NEPQ Question: How do your users do this without looking like a desperate telemarketer?"
- Founder: (Explains the "soft touch" / "opportunity" approach vs. hard selling). Also explain that we help our customers create text templates that land very well with candidates. We've had thousands of texts sent to candidates through our platform and we've had literally 1 candidate object to it. It's important to remember that people love texting because it's easy. And all you're doing with sending the text is making the candidate aware of a new job opportunity, giving them some quick details, and asking if they're interested in learning more. That's it. And candidly, I always laugh a little when someone says "I want to make sure to not look desperate" because i) candidates can see all the job postings on Indeed and how long it's been open ii) Who cares? What's more important, worrying about how someone is gonna react to a text message, or filling your trucks for busy season?

- OPTIONAL: Can explain how our texts are fully compliant with privacy laws because recruiting texts can be sent to anybody and don't require any opt-in. The law is very clear on this and that's why recruiters are able to do their job. The spam privacy laws only apply when you're trying to sell something. We're providing them a real job opportunity.

4. The "Consequence" & Offer (Minutes 30–35)

Visual: Back to camera or Offer Slide.

0:30 - The Cost of Inaction

- Bill: "It's interesting. We spend hours optimizing our Service Titan workflows, but we leave the most important part—the people—to chance. NEPQ Question to Audience: If you go into the busy season this year relying on the same 'Post and Pray' strategy you used last year... do you think your results are going to be any different?"

0:32 - The Solution (The Offer)

- Bill: "Obviously, this is a tool for people who want to be aggressive. [Founder], you put together a package for the Service Titan Hacks group. What does that look like?"
 - Founder: (Presents the Offer: e.g., Waived setup fee, first month discount, or guaranteed lead count).
 - Bill: "Okay, guys, I'm dropping the link in the chat now. If you want to stop waiting for luck and start building a pipeline, go check it out."

5. Q&A (Minutes 35–45)

Visual: Q&A Slide or Faces.

0:35 - Rapid Fire Questions

- Bill: "We have a few questions coming in."
 - (Seed Question 1): "Does this work for rural areas or just big cities?"
 - (Seed Question 2): "What happens if I text a guy and he says 'stop'?"

- (Seed Question 3): "Is this a contract or month-to-month?"

0:44 - The Final Word

- Bill: "We are at time. My advice: You can master marketing, you can master operations. But if you don't have the bodies, you can't grow. Take control of your pipeline. Thanks, [Founder]. Thanks, everyone. The recording will be up in the group later."

Follow Up Plan

1. The "Immediate" Automated Follow-Up (TR Handles This)

Timing: 1 Hour after webinar ends. Audience: Everyone who registered.

The webinar platform Riverside should automatically send this.

- Subject: Replay: The "Invisible" Talent Market (Link Inside)
 - Body: Simple. "Here is the replay. Here is the link to the offer we mentioned. Reply to this email if you have questions."

2. Your (Bill's) Follow-Up: The "Realization" Email

Timing: Friday Morning (Day after webinar). Audience: Your entire list (Attendees + Non-Attendees). Goal: Highlight the "Wow Moment" to drive replay views or sign-ups.

Subject: Did you see the live search?

First Name,

We had a packed house yesterday for the recruiting deep dive.

If you missed it, we did something risky. We had the founders do a live, real-time search of their database to see if "passive" candidates actually exist.

(The "Wow" Factor) We looked at a random market, and within seconds, we saw hundreds of experienced techs who are currently working but open to offers.

(NEPQ Realization Question) It made me wonder... if those are the guys your competitors are hiring while you are waiting for Indeed resumes... is it even a fair fight?

I wanted to make sure you got the recording so you can decide for yourself if this outbound method is right for your shop.

Best, Bill

3. The "Secret Weapon" (TR Founders' Manual Work)

Timing: Friday (Day after webinar). Audience: Attendees Only (High Intent).

This is the highest converting tactic in B2B. The TR team should not send a generic email. They should send a Personal Loom Video to the top 20-30 hottest leads (people who stayed till the end or asked questions).

The Strategy:

1. TR Founder looks up the Attendee's location (e.g., "Mike from Dallas").
2. TR Founder opens their software and searches "HVAC Tech" in "Dallas."
3. Records a 30-second screen share video.

The Script:

"Hey Mike, thanks for joining Bill's webinar yesterday. I know it's hard to trust software until you see it work in your backyard.

So I just pulled up Dallas on my screen. Look at this—I found 412 techs within 20 miles of your shop. Including this guy here with 8 years of experience.

If you want to see who these guys are, let's hop on a 5-minute demo. Reply and let me know."

Why this works: It proves the product works for THEM specifically. It destroys the "Does this work in my small town?" objection.

4. The "No-Show" Campaign (TR Handles This)

Timing: Monday (3 days later). Audience: People who registered but didn't attend.

Subject: Is your hiring pipeline full yet? Body:

"You registered for the session with Bill on Thursday but missed the live demo.

We broke down the math on why waiting for inbound applicants is costing the average contractor $20k+ in lost revenue per empty truck.

If you are still looking for techs, take 5 minutes to watch the segment where we show the database.

[Link to Replay]"

5. The "Final Nudge" (Bill)

Timing: Tuesday (5 days later). Audience: Your list. Goal: Close the loop and move on.

Subject: Last thought on recruiting... Body:

"I'm closing the book on the recruiting conversation for a while as we move on to other operational topics.

But before I do, I wanted to ask one last question (Consequence Question):

If you look at your dispatch board today, and you imagine it looking exactly the same 6 months from now because you couldn't find the talent...what does that do to your plans for the year?

If you want to fix the pipeline, the special offer TradeRunner gave our group expires tomorrow.

See ya, Bill"
